HEAVY LOSS OF LIFE IS FEARED IN CHINESE HARBOR TRAGEDY.
WORST SINCE '06

Vessels Swept Ashore When Sea Is Whipped Into Seething Terror.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Hong Kong.—Heavy loss of life is believed to have been claimed by a typhoon that struck the harbor here at 9:30 Saturday morning, sweeping the waters into a seething menace that flung several ships into their depths and tossed others in havens of refuge. Many Europeans were among the victims, it is feared.

It was the worst storm experienced here since 1906. Following observations warning, ocean going steamers and small craft sought shelter last night. Bomb fire signaled the approach of the storm center this morning. Within an hour the wind was blowing with hurricane force and the harbor was tempestuous.

All About Perish.

The steamer Ming Sang whistled long blasts of distress. A blue funnel tow boat made an attempt to reach the stricken vessel. The high running sea made the rescue impossible and the Ming Sang went down. Except for the two officers reported saved all aboard are believed to have perished.

The Ming Sang, owned by the Indo-China Steam Navigation company, was of 1,550 net tonnage. The British submarine L-9, parting from her moorings, drifted westward and sank off the Hong Kong club. One sailor swam away, holding fast to a small yacht buoy. The Ginyo Maru drifted toward the Royal Naval yard wharf, where she was grounded, slightly damaged.

The Ginyo Maru and another vessel, the Zikino Maru was brought up alongside a pier, to which she was able to moor undamaged. The Ginyo Maru drifted toward the Royal Naval yard wharf, where she was grounded, slightly damaged.

The liner Empress of Australia moored in midstream and successfully withstood the typhoon. The French mail liner Andre Lebon was swept, dragging her anchors, a considerable distance, and came perilously near following the Empress of Australia.

Big trees were uprooted and in several places, hung against the boundary walls, which collapsed. In the business district, sign boards were blown to bits and wall hangings were torn off.

Telephone cables were blown down and tramway services suspended. It is not known how Kowloon fared, as communication with that port was cut off.

GASOLINE BOOST FAILS TO SPREAD

Standard Holds to Low Price for Present Despite Dakota Action.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Chicago.—Advices received in Chicago up to noon today indicated that the increase in gasoline prices in South Dakota to 20 cents a gallon, including the state tax of two cents, authorized by Gov. W. H. McMaster and passed by the legislature, had not generally gone into effect, and for that reason, officials of the Standard Oil company stated that they had made no change in their price.

The state oil depot at Mitchell sold gasoline at 16 cents a gallon, which price was met by the Standard, which price was met by the independent dealers at Mitchell. The price of 20 cents, including the state tax, was expected to be in effect by Friday.

It was expected the Standard Oil company of Indiana then would raise its price in South Dakota to the same figure.

ADOPTED CHILD IS HELD HEIR OF ITS NATURAL PARENTS

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Mankato, Minn.—Judge W. L. Comstock of the Leech Lake county district court, established a precedent in the district court of Minnesota today when he issued an order reversing the order and final decree of the probate court, annulling the adoption of a child as an heir at law of its natural parents.

The decision of Judge Comstock was made in the matter of the estate of Henry L. Roberts, with his daughter, Martha Roberts, as appellant, against Elizabeth A. Owen and Kate M. Roberts and the administrators of the estate.

When Martha Roberts was five years old, her mother died and she was adopted. Her natural father, Henry L. Roberts, remarried and had two more children. He died in 1922. The probate court in disposing of the will, assigned the residue of the estate, valued at $34,000, to Roberts' wife and child, Martha Roberts, who was being cut off by the decree, which was reversed by Judge Comstock.

In rendering his opinion, Judge Comstock stated that of Moses and the Arabic, Athenian, Hebrew, Roman and the Justinian codes to uphold contention that a child born in lawful wedlock and later adopted retains the right of inheritance by such descent.

PARKER PEN OPENS PLANT IN CANADA

$100,000 Corporation Formed for Manufacture of Pens in Toronto.

Establishment at Toronto, Canada, of a factory to take care of the Parker Pen Co. business in that country and other British possessions has been made and production started. President George S. The step was taken in view of the duty on imported goods from the United States. The plant is in charge of W. A. Smith, who was formerly connected with a large Canadian pen concern.

Production Is Begun

Production started last week with part of the machinery installed and the force will be increased as fast as possible. Mr. Parker indicated. Several men from the Janesville plant are in Canada assisting in starting the plant. An entire floor in a large building has been leased. Four salesmen are now in Canada and the force will be increased in accordance with the business, the Parker Pen head said.

The opening of the Canadian plant will ultimately have some effect on the Janesville plant but it is not expected that there will be any loss of work. A large part of the Parker pen line will be manufactured in Toronto. There are more than 400 different pens manufactured by the Parker company, but Mr. Parker said Friday that this will be reduced, as it is no longer considered good policy to have so many and it is very costly.

COURT HOUSE PARK HARDING MEMORIAL

FOREIGN POLICY CLEARLY SPOKEN

Coolidge Sets Europe Right on Rumors of War Debt Cancellation.

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Copyright 1932 by Janesville Daily Gazette.

Washington — The United States government under President Coolidge has let its foreign policy be known to the European world through a series of statements and actions, so that on the one hand there shall be no inflation of hopes based upon promises impossible of acceptance here and on the other that there shall be a recognition by Europe of America's willingness to co-operate where the interests of this country are involved.

The moment President Coolidge took the oath a rumor swept Europe that he favored cancellation of war debts. Chairman Smoot, chairman of the American debt funding commission, who happened to be in Paris at the time, issued a denial, but there is no doubt the Europeans have been casting eager eyes toward America in the hope that a change of administration might mean something tangible in the way of affirmative aid from the United States.

Secretary Hughes has lived with the European situation day and night for more than two years, and President Coolidge is not the kind of a man to cast unknown waters on the fire. He has the authority and power to do so. He will rely on the secretary of state, as did Mr. Harding. And Mr. Hughes is steering just now a safe and sane policy, trying not to impair American influence by championing either publicly or privately the cause of any of the European nations and seeking ways to give an impression of American readiness to help when the foundations of a world settlement are built by the statesmen of Great Britain, France and Germany.

On foreign policy Mr. Coolidge's observations on Tuesday of this week concerning foreign policy contained the gist of what the American people have been told in other directions. America now knows to be American foreign policy. "America will welcome concrete proposals but can not promise to engage in any of them unless they conform to American interests. And by this time the Europeans know Secretary Hughes well enough to dismiss the thought that cancellation of war debts for a moment has been considered. For one thing, congress has the power to cancel or reduce or fund existing war debts, and the executive will certainly not recommend to congress anything which American public opinion does not sanction. Thus far there has been no convincing evidence of a desire on the part of the American people to accept a reduction or cancellation of allied debts.

Help America's Assets

How can America help? When the Europeans have gotten away from their power and have seriously agreed to attempt the fixing of Germany's capacity to pay, the United States can lend its neutral and impartial personnel to assist German assets and liabilities in exact form.

The New Haven speech made by Secretary Hughes now has been approved by President Coolidge. It stands as the foreign policy of the new administration. And that speech made it very clear that reparations must be settled first as between the allies before anything could be done in other directions. America suggested an impartial commission of business men and bankers entirely disconnected from the governments of all countries. These men were to build the foundation upon which a diplomatic settlement could be based. Later there might be treaty negotiations to safeguard mutually the interests of existing countries against attack. But the essential of the moment is a business and banking settlement — an honest balance sheet for all Europe.

American Experts to Aid

In making that speech, American experts would gladly help. In other words the United States has not changed the policy from that of the Harding administration but has simply reiterated previous expressions at a moment when it was thought the new president might be ready to take a further step. He is ready to go further but the initiative must come from Europe and the proposals for

BIG PLANT MAY BE LOCATED HERE

Hudson Mfg. Co. Considers Janesville as Site for Main Factory.

Belief that Janesville may be selected as the site for a big manufacturing plant of the Hudson Manufacturing company, was expressed Friday by R. G. Thompson, manager of the local plant.

Factories controlled by the Hudson company are now located at Hastings and A. Part Lea, Minn., De Pere, and Deerfield, Wisconsin, besides Janesville, manufacturing a complete line of barn and farm equipment.

Desire of the company officials to consolidate the plants in a central district led officials to investigate conditions in several Wisconsin cities. At the present time Milwaukee and Janesville are two receiving the most favor and it is thought that Janesville will be selected.

Would Mean 500 Men

In the event that Janesville is picked for the site, one of the biggest organizations of its kind will be located in the city. Hundreds of men are now employed by the company in their various plants besides large office forces.

Between 500 and 600 men would be eventually employed by the company in the city where the factory is built. Several sites in Janesville are being considered by Mr. Thompson and officials of the organization for the main offices at Minneapolis.

Although the proposed consolidation of the plants is being discussed for some time, said Mr. Thompson, active work on the project has only recently started.

Here Since 1919

It was first hoped by the promoters to select the site in Wisconsin this year, but proposed tax legislation of the state legislature on industrial property, delayed, propelling it to this year.

The local Hudson plant is located at 225 North Main street, in the building formerly occupied by the Janesville Tool company, which for many years conducted the business. The plant was taken over in 1919.

The Hudson company was founded in 1905 in Minneapolis by H. D. Hudson and in its short existence has developed a huge business and its products are now distributed in all sections of the country.

R. G. Thompson, manager of the local plant, has been with the organization for over 13 years and has been in charge of the local plant since 1920.

May Carriers Local Specialty

Although the company manufactures a complete line of accessories, production at the Janesville factory is concentrated upon hay carriers.

The carriers are manufactured out of malleable iron and are light and easy to operate. Hudson double steel track is many times stronger than ordinary steel and is constructed of heavy angle rolled from all of the carriers manufactured at the plant are equipped with positive deadlocks and can be obtained for practically every type of tractor.

Within a few weeks Mr. Thompson will personally direct a selling campaign throughout Illinois for a wider distribution of the carriers. Although the organization has scores of salesmen, the carriers have not been pushed as much as desired, because of the complicated nature of the carriers.

Offices of the Hudson company are maintained at Minneapolis, Omaha, and Kansas City besides the factory offices.

CLAIMS SEARCH WAS ONLY SPITE WORK

That the raid of several weeks ago was nothing but the result of spite work on the part of one neighbor is the claim of Mrs. Mary Travis, whose trial has been set for Aug. 24 in circuit court. She declares the police took no liquor in her home, merely some malt extract used for medicinal purposes by her husband, who is in the hospital. The police took along an empty vinegar jug too.

MIDSEASON LETUP OF TRADE SHOWN

Chicago — Employment increased, and the flow of orders slowed down in Illinois industry during July, according to a survey of industrial conditions, published by the general advisory council of the Illinois department of labor. It was expected that the break in satisfactory conditions is due, more or less, to the mid-season let-up of trade.

RUPTURE SHIELD EXPERT HERE

MEINHARDT, WELL KNOWN IN THIS SPECIALTY. CALLED TO JANESVILLE.

E. J. Meinhardt, the well known expert from Chicago, will personally be at the Grand Hotel, Janesville, Wis., on Wednesday and Thursday only, August 22nd and 23rd.

Mr. Meinhardt says "The Vacuum Rupture Shield" will not only hold the rupture perfectly, but will contract the opening in ten days on the average, case—usually giving instantaneous relief, withstanding all strain regardless of the size and location of the rupture. This instrument is highly indorsed for producing results in the United States and foreign countries without the use of surgery, medical treatment, prescriptions or injections.

Caution: Ruptured persons should beware of old-style trusses usually placed the pad on the lump and not at the rupture opening. This often causes serious trouble resulting in strangulation and necessitating a surgical operation. Mr. Meinhardt will be glad to demonstrate free to all who call at the hotel from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m., the unusually rapid results produced by "The Vacuum Rupture Shield." The largest and most difficult cases, those following operations, are especially desired. Business demands prevent stopping at any other place in this section and he will be here for one day only.

Notice: Do not write asking to be fitted by mail as this is impossible. Every case must be seen personally. If interested, you must call at this hotel on the above date.

Form Local Group to Work for U. S. Child Labor Law

A local committee has been formed to cooperate with the Wisconsin branch of the National Child Labor committee in the campaign for a federal amendment that will make possible the national regulation of child labor. Mrs. Henry Mangen, chairman of the Janesville League of Women Voters, heads the local committee, the other members being: Mesdames C. A. Sanborn, O. W. Athor, John Fitzgerald, Miss Mary Barker, Stunt, Frank O. Blot, Judge C. L. Pilefeld, L. F. Bennett, James Dorrans, Bernard Palmer, Ira Wortendyke.

Latters have been sent by this committee to community leaders and other citizens throughout the county urging that they enroll as members of the national organization and assist in the work of education in behalf of the proposed legislation. H. H. Jacobs, Milwaukee, is chairman of the Wisconsin state committee. The letter explains the situation as follows:

"It is reported that every year in the United States over a million children between 14 and 16 leave school to go to work. In 1920 over one million children 10 to 16 years of age, inclusive, were reported by census enumerators as engaged in gainful occupations.

Inasmuch as two attempts of the federal government to extend its protection to child laborers by indirect measures have been declared unconstitutional by the United States supreme court, it would appear that federal regulation is possible only through an amendment to the constitution. Compelling congress to pass a direct child labor law to be used as a standard wage. This has been laid over until next session."

In New Offices — Joseph H. Scholler, optometrist and oculist, is now established in new offices in the rear of the Jay Bliss drug store, 225 West Milwaukee street, having moved from 207 West Milwaukee street this week.

DAY NURSERY CHILDREN

"My papa ain't living, he runned away," was the arological explanation of a day nursery six-year old with reference to family affairs. This little fellow, his five-year old sister and their hard-working mother, at may not have a week's free outing at the Salvation Army camp because the mother feels that she cannot get along without the wages she would earn during that week in a local factory. "You see, she explained, "winter is coming and I must save up money to buy fuel. Every dollar counts. It is a great help to have the children careen for in the day nursery and I wish they could have the outing, but I don't see how I can afford to go."

150,000 PHONE CALLS CALLS HANDLED AT GAZETTE YEARLY

How would you like to handle 150,000 telephone calls a year? That is what it takes to make "an unusual newspaper" makes it possible for you to have your Gazette come out regularly day after day without a break in the routine.

One hundred and fifty thousand telephone calls are a great many. It is only a matter of daily conversation in each of those conversations, which would be a small average, more than 7,500,000 words would have passed from transmitter to receiver.

The "phone" business of southern Wisconsin's unusual newspaper has grown so rapidly that it has been essential to install the most modern compact switchboard, which has 18 lines leading to the outside world and tapping every corner of the United States it wanted, is capable of handling traffic as fast as the operator can move his hands. It has 30 connections inside the Gazette building leading to the various departments. Seven of the trunk lines now in daily use are 18 of the inside lines, the balance being held in reserve for further growth of the institution.

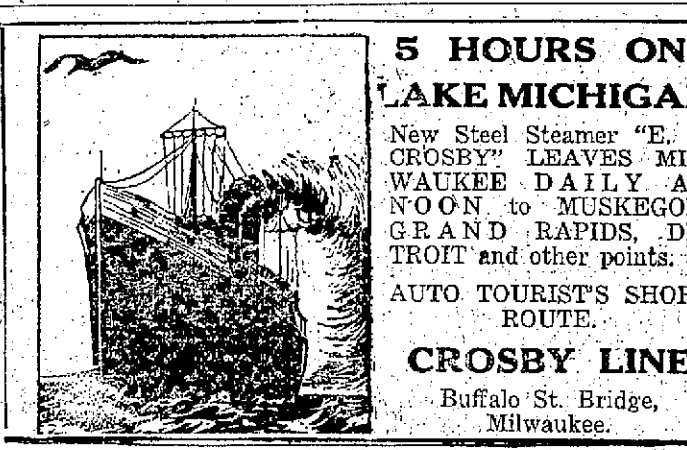

An average day at the switchboard shows 125 incoming words, 182 outgoing calls, 18 long distance conversations. That would be 6,100 incoming calls, a year, 57,000 outgoing calls, a year, 18 long distance calls. When big happenings are on, as many as 5,000 calls are handled in a few hours.

MYERS THEATER IS LEASED TO MARTI

Will Reopen in September With Motion Pictures and Vaudeville.

The Myers theater, oldest in the city and on whose stage the leading productions of the last half century have been given, will be reopened in September.

A three year lease has been signed by Allen W. Marti, Milwaukee, with Peter L. Myers, and the doors of the theater which have been closed since the management of Charles G. Boutwell, on May 8, will be opened during the week of Sept. 2.

Mr. Marti is in Janesville making arrangements for the installation of fixtures to replace those sold at the time the theater was closed. Plans for entertainment attractions have not been fully developed but Mr. Marti announced that there would be motion pictures, special stage attractions and vaudeville.

"We will give the public what they want," said Mr. Marti. "We cannot say anything further at the present time."

Mr. Marti is a former Monroe man and has been engaged in the motion pictures in Milwaukee and northern Wisconsin for three years and through signing the lease with Mr. Myers becomes proprietor of one of the oldest theaters in Wisconsin. The theater was built in 1870.

The opening attraction at the Myers will be the Beach-Jones Stock company.

Mr. Marti said he has his money in the Beverly theater and has retained Chester Goetz as manager. The Beverly together with the Majestic theater has been controlled by the Community Theaters corporation of which Leon E. Goetz is the president. The Community Theaters company had previously secured a lease on the Myers theater but did not carry out their plans to operate it three days a week.

Asked if he has control of the Majestic, Mr. Marti said, "Not yet."

SCREEN AND STAGE

ATTRACTIONS AT JANESVILLE THEATRES WEEK OF AUGUST 18-25.

BEVERLY.
Sunday through Wednesday—"Westbound Limited," starring Ralph Lewis, and "The Haunted House," with Buster Keaton.
Thursday through Saturday—"A Gentleman of Leisure," with Jack Holt, Cassius Ferguson, Sigrid Holmquist, Alec Francis, Adela Partridge, Frank Nelson, Alfred Allen, Nedra Earl, and Alice Queenberry.

MAJESTIC.
Sunday and Monday—"The Midnight Guest," featuring Grace Darmond, with a cast including Marion Hamilton and Clyde Fillmore.

Tuesday through Thursday—"My American Wife," with Gloria Swanson.
Friday and Saturday—"Double Dealing," with Rex Gibson and a supporting cast of Eddie Gribbon, Jack Dillon and Gertrude Claire.

APOLLO.
Monday through Thursday—"The Girl of the Golden West," with J. Warren Kerrigan and Sylvia Egan.
Friday through Sunday—"Vaudeville and feature picture."

AT THE APOLLO.
J. Warren Kerrigan and Sylvia Egan have the leading parts in "The Girl of the Golden West," which is to show four days, starting Monday. A glance at the characters reveals the type of story—Trinidad Joe, Handson

Harry, Old Jed Hawkins, Pedro Michalson—and the band in the days of the California gold rush. It is not, however, a "wild west" melodrama, even though the plot follows the conventional form of the usual western picture with the pretty bar maid, the gambler, the gambler's wife, the jealous lover. Some new situations are developed, which, with the good acting and backgrounds, will make a program of considerable interest.

The story, by David Belasco, has also been produced on the stage, with Caruso in the leading part, and in book form.

There will be a feature picture and vaudeville Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

AT THE BEVERLY.
"Westbound Limited," a railroad drama, which is to show Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, probably has more thrills than any other picture of its kind ever filmed. The cast includes Ralph Lewis as Eli Zuckley, a veteran engineer, Bill Hall, daughter of the railroad president, and Johnny Barton, a train dispatcher.

A race between the railroad president in his automobile and his engineer in the train comes to a near tragic end when the locomotive, under the control of the engineer's son, would have been struck by the train.

Clashed signals, a man on horseback riding to stop two trains speeding toward each other and a forest fire are other exciting episodes. The romance of the daughter of the railroad president and the train dispatcher terminates in the most dramatic "The Haunted House" special.

Jack Holt in "A Gentleman of Leisure" presents a comedy-drama in which some unusual occurrences take place. Robert Platt, "the gentleman of leisure," a wealthy young American, goes out to meet and obtain a photograph of Molly Creedon, daughter of the millionaire deputy commissioner, who is in New York within 24 hours. His alliance with "Spice" Miller, second story worker, and the final theft of two pearl necklaces, by another hand of crooks, furnish the material for the plot. The climax comes when the supposed thief reveals his identity.

AT THE MAJESTIC.
"The Midnight Guest," which will play Sunday and Monday, tells the story of the life of a girl brought among thieves and then suddenly placed in a home of refinement, where she overcomes the impulse to steal and eventually rescues the man who has befriended her, from the disputation into which he has plunged.

The cast includes Grace Darmond, Marion Hamilton and Clyde Fillmore.
"My American Wife," with Gloria Swanson, runs from Tuesday until Thursday.

In the role of a small town youth, Rex Gibson, from "Double Dealing," which is to be presented Friday and Saturday, takes the story down to the hard luck of the boy, his inheritance of his father's drug store, with the mortgage on his father's house, the mortgagee, and his final awakening which wins his success in two ways—in love and money.

The serial, "The Oregon Trail," will also be shown the last two days of the week.

OLSON, FORGER, SEEKING PARDON

Durand Man Asks Freedom After Serving One of Three Years.

Sentenced to three years in the state prison at Wausau on Aug. 7, 1922, by Judge H. L. Maxfield when he pleaded guilty to a forgery charge, an absolute pardon is now being sought for O. T. Olson, Durand, Ill. Formal application will be filed with Governor Blaine next Saturday by William D. Knight, Rockford, attorney for the convict.

Following his arrest by Patrolman Con. O'Leary and Charles Harp in Janesville Aug. 5, a year ago, Olson confessed to having cashed two bogus checks aggregating $16. On a check made payable to William Johnson he forged the name of P. J. Murphy and obtained $25 at Herman Buggs' saloon on July 14. Later he wrote another check on Murphy making it payable to Harry Anderson and cashed it at Stupp's Meat market. This was for $22.

"I did it for a girl I was crazy about—she is gone now," Olson told the court at that time. The girl got all but $6 of the money, Olson said. He is alleged to have admitted cashing checks on Robert Rockett and others here. Olson was arraigned two years ago on a forgery charge.

Shall We Have More Pat Steins on the Police Force?

Pat Stein, police officer of the city of Janesville, has bruises, loosened teeth and scratches over his neck received in the line of duty. He was assaulted while making an arrest and after-ward assaulted when he had delivered his prisoners at the police station. Nothing has been done with the assailants for this. They go free with an apology from the judge for their having to face public music and be "humiliated." But Pat Stein, an officer of the Janesville police force, having been beaten up while doing his duty, is fined ten days' pay and suspended. This is an incentive for keeping out of sight when the well-to-do and high brow hell raisers come to town and disturb the peace. What would you do if you were a policeman and the same situation arose? With the Stein case in mind would you not have business at the rear of the Saxie theater? What is the district attorney doing that he should permit a policeman to be assaulted and no action taken? What is the chief doing that he should be content to allow the culprit under a guilty plea to go along and the police not be given the support it ought to have. Pat Stein should have a commendation for his self-control when he was first assaulted. Is the council going to let the morale of the police force be destroyed by permitting this to go by without cognizance? Suppose an unknown man, filled with venom, and who had no intention, had assaulted Pat Stein. We would have moved heaven and earth to see that he served a term in jail. There would have been no apologetic talk about "humiliation." The fine does not humiliate a man. It is the act itself.

The Gazette asks here and now that Pat Stein be restored to the police force, his badge returned, his pay given him and that whatever stigma attaches to him as to the records, be removed permanently. If he needs any punishment for remaining in the police station after he delivered his prisoners let it be a reprimand in which the word "humiliation" be used as frequently as it was in the case of his assailants. If we are to have any sympathy let us give it to the man who did his duty and not spread it to those who plead guilty to a minor offense while the greater one is overlooked entirely.

An exchange says the French lack in good pastry. They may do better when they have made mince meat of Europe.

A Last Message from Harding.

One of the last things President Harding ever wrote, if not the very last, just before starting on the Alaskan trip, was a plea for the constitution of the United States and its better study and understanding. James M. Beck, noted lawyer and orator, is about to publish his series of lectures on the constitution and the president wrote the foreword for the book.

"Wise and just and righteous government," said the president, "is a democracy must depend upon the wisdom and justice of the people. . . . Let reverence of the law be breathed by every mother to the lisping babe that prattles on her lap; let it be taught in schools and seminaries and colleges; let it be written in primers, spelling books and almanacs; let it be preached from pulpits and proclaimed in legislative halls and enforced in courts of justice; let it become the political religion of the nation."

This is good enough to remember and preserve with attention. Last winter an effort was made by Assemblyman Matheson to have the constitution a necessary study in schools. It was defeated because the constitution at times is embarrassing, as is the idea of patriotic devotion to the nation to some of the politicians of the state of Wisconsin. It is a pity it is so.

With Saunders out, somebody else has got to feed the Piggly Wiggly.

Booze and the Auto Driver.

Booze is the greatest enemy of the automobile. With the free sale of liquor, instead of killing 40 people a day, as we do now, there would be many times that number. Day after day we have accidental cases where driving a car while intoxicated is a large contributor in negligence. Our mild tempered judges fine the persons the small minimum. The boozed drivers go out and do it over again and again. They seldom go to jail; often they are "prominent" citizens, and must needs be considered with gentleness. Elections are coming on and votes are wanted, more's the pity. The sober man driving an automobile is left without protection. Soft peddling on drunken drivers is an insult to the majority public which does not get drunk. Whiskey that will make a man fighting drunk and attack a policeman while doing his duty makes a poor combination with the steering wheel of an automobile. If we are to have free and unimpeded coining of liquor again, we will have to quit the automobiles and go back to the horse which has as much sense as the drunken driver and frequently a lot more.

PICKING COTTON BY SUCTION

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Washington.—The same mechanical principle that is used so successfully in cleaning rice, carpets, walls, drawers and so forth—air suction, has at last solved the problem of picking cotton by machine. And that has been some problem.

For years man's ingenuity has been directed toward its solution and from time to time numerous cotton-picking devices have been brought forward with the statement that at last the impossible had been accomplished. But, one after another, those same machines have gone to the scrap heap—none of them would do the work. No longer ago than last January it was declared authoritatively that no machine had been perfected for picking cotton successfully.

Now, however, if the claims for the newest device are to be credited, the cotton grower will simply go out and vacuum clean his plants, once, twice, three—as often as is necessary—and he will get his crop, gathered with one-sixth the labor it has heretofore required.

This means great things for the south, by no means the least of which is that it promises relief from the labor shortage threatened that section by the migration of negroes to the north. Where 2,100,000 people were required to harvest a cotton crop, 350,000 workers can do the trick, provided the new machine is in general use. Not all the cotton pickers are negroes, however, it being estimated that 65 per cent of the crop is handled by whites.

The difficulties to be overcome by a successful cotton-picking machine are numerous. In the first place, the cotton boll exudes a gum that speedsily clogs and disables all the intricate parts of the apparatus used. Second, the long white fibres must be picked out of their nest in a cluster of dried sepals, and it was next to impossible to devise a machine that would do a clean job of this. Third, the cotton does not ripen at a uniform height from the ground; sometimes it is only a few inches off the ground, and again it may be all of six or seven feet.

Last of all, the cotton does not all ripen at once, but ripens continuously from July to mid-winter and the plants must be picked over three and sometimes four times. When the fields are ready for the first picking, the plants are filled with young tender bolls of all stages of growth that are likely to be irreparably damaged by a machine.

Under the old tedious process of hand picking it is readily apparent that harvesting the crop is by far the biggest item in the cost of cotton culture. The hands, men, women and children—often every available one in the community is employed—go into the field as soon as the dew is off the plant, each taking a row of cotton and picking the lint from the bolls until the sack strapped across the shoulder is filled.

The workers are paid by the 100 pounds, and the expert hands will pick from 250 to 300 pounds a day, although the average for the entire cotton belt will not exceed 125 pounds. There is a record of a sixteen-year-old Texas girl who picked 603 pounds in one day, and two Oklahoma boys are said to have averaged 1,100 pounds a day, but that sort of work is like that of the stenographer who wins speed medals—it means nothing in the general average.

An investigation by the Department of Agriculture into the comparative efficiency of white and negro labor in the cotton field gives pre-eminence to the whites. It showed that in 152 counties with a negro population amounting to 75 per cent of the whole the average picking per day was 111 pounds, while in 192 counties with a corresponding predominance of white population the average was 148 pounds per day.

The wage paid ranges from 50 cents to $1 or more per hundred. When the total crop may run any where from ten to fifteen or even sixteen million bales of 500 pounds each, it is obvious that a big item the picking amounts to in the aggregate, and what a saving may be effected if the new machine will do the wonders claimed for it.

With the new machine, as when the negro or other laborer moves slowly through the cotton field dragging a dusty sack of cotton, the human eye directs the human hand in picking the cotton. The machine, has two large sheet-steel tanks, on the inside of each of which is a cotton-sack, some twelve feet long with its mouth held open. A delivery tube enters the mouth of the sack. From this tube leads a flexible rubber hose, on the end of which is a nozzle of a little less than one inch in diameter.

A centrifugal pump exhausts the air from the tank, whereupon if the nozzle of the flexible rubber tube is opened a powerful blast of air rushes into it. If the nozzle is moved to the cotton, the air and the extremely light fibre is caught by the rush of air and, as one description puts it, "jerked" hence in a manner so unbelievably swift that it looks like magic. The dried leaves or sepals being relatively much heavier are left on the plant. There is nothing about the apparatus to become clogged up from the gum of the cotton-boll.

The whole machine rides on top of a Fordson tractor, of which there are already some 100,000 in the south, and to which it may be attached without any modification of the tractor. The picking tubes have a spring valve attachment to the nozzle so that if they are dropped by the operator by accident the air stream is closed off automatically and no dirt will be picked up from the ground.

In actual operation the air pump is put on only one tank at a time. Six pickers constitute the crew of each machine and all work at once. Each picker wears a belt, to which the vacuum tube from the harvester is attached. The tube forks in the back and smaller tubes lead to two nozzles so that the picker works with both hands at once. The air lines lie along the rows and consequently do not break down the plants. When the cotton sack on the interior of the tank is full, the white cotton is seen banked up against a little window in the tank. The operator then switches the pump to the other tank and removes the full sack.

In tests in Texas the harvester picked cotton at the rate of 80 pounds per hour per man, and the cleanliness resulting from its being sacked in the machine instead of being dragged over the ground led cotton buyers to offer two cents more per pound for the vacuum-picked cotton.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

SUNRISE.

Today I saw the sun come up, like Neptune from the sea.
I saw him light a cliff with gold and wake a distant tree.
I saw him shake his shaggy head and laugh the night away.
And lose unto a sleeping world another golden day.

His waves, which had been black and cold, came in with silver crests.
I saw the sunbeams gently wake the songbirds in their nests.
The slow-treading night at slumped back, and strewn on field and lawn.
On every blade of grass I saw the jewels of the dawn.

Never was monarch ushered in with such a cavalcade.
No hero bringing victory home has seen such wealth displayed.
In honor of the coming day, the humblest plant stood on the curbstone of the world in radiant liveliness.

Pageants of splendor man may plant, with robes of burnished gold.
On horses from Arabia may prance the knights of old;
Heralds on silver horns may blow, and kings come riding in.
But I have seen the dawn's pageantry—I've watched a day begin!

ON THE SPUR OF THE MOMENT

By ROY K. MORTON

OUR OWN DAILY SHORT STORY.

Getting Back.

Mrs. Wilson wanted to get Mrs. Johnson's cook away from her so badly that she actually went to Mrs. Johnson's house when she was away and offered the cook more money than she had ever received in a big dinner Mrs. Johnson did not notice her.

"Mrs. Johnson, you know Mrs. Wilson, do you not?" said the lady who sat between them.

"No, I believe not," said Mrs. Johnson, "but I understand she calls on my cook."

Personal Health Service

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
Noted Physician and Author

THE IRON OF IRON.

After all is said and done all the iron in the human body scarcely weighs as much as a silver quarter. Most of the iron in the body is in the form of iron (less than one-tenth of an ounce) of the body is a constituent of the hemoglobin or coloring matter of the red corpuscles of the blood. Hemoglobin is the carrier of the oxygen upon which all the functions of nutrition and metabolism depend. So the quantity of iron in the body is of great importance for health. It is the three pounds of iron in the average man, but not more important for while a man may be a man even though he is not very red blooded, he is a jellyfish indeed without his full quota of calcium. What we need these days, I wish the Jack London school of educators could learn, is hard bones, sound, logical, man. Many untutored persons imagine iron confers physical strength, will power or beauty.

Twenty years ago there was some difference of opinion as to the question of the relative value of organic and inorganic iron for man, some ingenious theories being offered to support the idea that only organic iron is utilized by man. But the question was put to the test of actual experiment and accurate chemical analyses, and it was soon proved that the body utilizes inorganic (mineral) iron as readily as organic iron. Mineral or inorganic iron is the form in which this element is present in certain mineral waters, and some of the best "easiest" preparations which contain organic iron is the form present in such foods as spinach, peas, beans, prunes, egg yolk, oatmeal, entire wheat, almonds, lettuce, lean beef, etc.

A state of anemia (weakened blood) can seldom be due to a shortage of iron unless the individual's diet is abnormally restricted. The best remedy in so many cases of this kind is to take a small amount of iron daily, which is more than very young infants take in a day, so that such infants have to rely on the surplus store of iron with which they have been born, unless something is added to the diet to supply iron. Normal infants get all the iron they need.

HOROSCOPE

MONDAY, AUGUST 20, 1923.

This is rather an uncertain day, for astrologers read that Uranus is strongly adverse while Saturn and Neptune are in a more favorable aspect.

It is a most auspicious way for farmers and all who cultivate the earth, the good influence extending to political movements as well as to the process of tilling the soil.

Business affairs will continue to interest many persons in all parts of the country, the stars continuing to stimulate the homeowning instinct.

Each who is thinking on political questions will mark the autumn according to the seers, for Neptune has sinister power and Uranus contributes to mental confusion.

This is most emphatically an unfavorable day for accepting attention from young men who are new friends.

One of the sinister influences of this time tends to make persons even less truthful than formerly. Warning is given that many persons of high standing may become affected by the inclination to exaggerate.

The same planetary influences that encourage lack of veracity stimulate the imagination and for this reason unusually good works of fiction may be produced at this time.

Unrest among workers and discontent among all classes of men and women may be evident as the autumn advances. Dangerous propaganda must be prevented from reaching the people, the seers declare.

According to ancient lore this should be a favorable date for weddings, although the old adage says, "Whoever wed in August, be many changes are sure to see."

Reactionary influences should gain headway while this rule prevails, but they will have power for only a short time.

The stars stress the need of education that will arouse the rising generation to spiritual needs, for they prophesy that unless the white man's world ceases its corrupt practices it will pass to a dark race.

Uranus is read as warning the United States that aviation should be a dominant governmental concern.

Persons whose birthdate is 19 should keep within the usual groove of work and play during the coming year. Changes will not be profitable.

Children born on this day may have much to learn of the occult, but these aspects of Leo and Virgo usually have extraordinary force of character that insures success.

Housekeepers Attention!

Fruit is plentiful this season and there is no shortage of sugar. Right now is the time to combine these two articles in delicious and tempting jams, preserves, marmalades, and conserves.

Every thrifty housekeeper should take away from the market the tables of August for use in the winter months of winter. This will enable her not only to save money, but to distribute the products of her own garden, or those she may buy at the height of the season, through a much longer time.

Defining a Term

Perhaps it is unnecessary to tell anyone that "Public Service Company" means a company which exists to render a vital service to the public. But the order of the words is important. Note that the public comes first; then service; and the company comes last. This is the way we think of the term in our organization, and our employees are urged to remember that sequence in all their dealings with our customers.

New Type Ranges Cook Better

They save gas, too. The reason is simple. They have "all open" cooking tops, permitting entrance of air which insures a hot gas flame. And then the burners are set close to the utensils so that intense penetrating heat is applied directly to them.

In addition the new ranges are all of the free open circulation type which means that the baking is done with heated fresh air. Scientific insulation or dead air space means that much of the heat is retained and therefore, the baking is done with greatest economy. See the New Gas Ranges at our show room.

The Riddle of the Spinning Wheel

By M. E. and T. W. HANSHEW

Being an Exploit in the Career of Hamilton Cleek, Detective Copyright, 1922, by Doubleday, Page & Co., and published by arrangement with McClure Newspaper Syndicate of New York City.

SYNOPSIS.
In deadly fear of the lives of her father and others in the Duggan household, Maud Duggan seeks help from Scotland Yard. Hamilton Cleek, under the alias of "The Riddle of the Spinning Wheel," takes up the attempt to solve the mystery of the spinning wheel, which on occasions and without warning, invariably a death follows. The head of the house is the old, feeble, and decrepit, human being, who, in the end, is a woman and her son, Cyril. It is placed in the hands of the detective for the death of all in order that he may be the heir of the estate. Cleek starts his investigation by making a list of all the acquaintances and finds that Ross, the eldest son, is an electrical expert. He is the one who is the most likely to be the murderer. Cleek, by lighting the house with electricity and adding other modern innovations, it is believed that he is the one who is the most likely to be the murderer. At a family gathering, the elder Duggan is slain while seated in his chair in a moment when the lights go out. Maud Duggan tells Cleek, "Beland" about it.

"It certainly does," Mr. Narkom's voice was a little apologetic. "Well, I have known what to think, Cleek. And you're such a beggar for stringing evidence together, and never forgetting it. And there's such a lot of it. And a chap gets horribly involved, and his memory is likely to play him tricks. And then that Italian chap whom Dollops has seen in the next of to-day—where does he come in?"

"Right into the midst of the whole caboodle," returned Cleek, "and I have to make you make any mistake about that, my friend. Dollops-Dago, to use Dollops' name, is one of the prime movers in this little inheritance game. He is the one who is the most likely to be the murderer. At a family gathering, the elder Duggan is slain while seated in his chair in a moment when the lights go out. Maud Duggan tells Cleek, "Beland" about it.

Mr. Narkom's voice was a trifle shrill. Cleek's eyes met his squarely, and he spoke up, "Who else?" he said.

CHAPTER XXIII

A Starting Point

And so it came about that Dollops and Cleek, both wearing dark suits (purchased in Cleek's case at the Three Fishers, and from his dressing-bag, and with caps pulled down over their faces and false moustaches decorating their upper lips as a protection against unforeseen discovery, went their way out in the clear moonlight toward that "grave pit" of which Dollops had spoken, and padded, soft-footedly down the hill, toward the little "cabin" of which Dollops had spoken, and after a quick glance at it, pushed open the door, and entered the valley of the night, and the morning sun would have vanished like the picture upon an exposed camera film.

But tonight, tonight, they could see the whole panorama of it lying close to the earth, concealed behind a huge, dark, and transparent, the picture of a face against the face of it, eyes sharpened upon that identical spot which told so much to them of what they sought. Perhaps a dozen men, armed with revolvers and coats off, shirt-sleeves rolled up, big, bonny men of brawn and muscle, come of a stock as tough as the granite of the hillsides, and the keen air of the Highlands that had given them birth.

"Glad!" whispered Dollops, awestruckly, his lips close against Cleek's ear.

"Thieves!" responded Cleek, with a quick intake of the breath. "Glad they're a lot, Dollops. And if they caught us in here, hidden away, our chances would be exactly nil. Where's your friend Baimy, eh?"

"Dahn there under that big tree, sir—just the blue shirt and the red neck-cloth. Jolly 'lookin' blighter, ain't he?"

"Em, not very. Not a sound, boy! There's a couple of 'em, eh? Have they? G'd! I'd like to have a look at one of those homely articles. I'll swear there's a false bottom to it. If I knew anything, I'd tell you, Cleek."

"Hello!—there's Tweed Coat!"

"Tweed Coat?" this time, passed a stone's throw in front of them, his head down-bent. But Cleek had seen and knew him at last. Ross Duggan had worn that coat, that even he, hawk-eyed detective that he was, could have told no difference between them. The moonlight struck upon the white band of the shirt, and the shirt, making it shine like a strip of ivory, and at something which his companion said to him, he caught it close together, and tucked the collar of the jacket up about his throat.

First the handkerchief so plainly marked "R. D." and now this! But that such a man should be mixed up in a thing of this sort, in a thing which was against all laws and regulations of the land that had borne him, made Cleek's mouth go grim. The handkerchief, the coat, and now the man in the white shirt was completed, and every link welded together. At least some part of the mystery was clear at last.

The man passed close against them where they were in the darkness, so close that Cleek's fingers might have reached out and caught at the other's trouser-leg and tripped him. But the time was not yet for that. Better let the thing go unsuspected until tomorrow afternoon, and then, when the coroner's inquest was at hand, rally them all together in the library once more, and make the final settlement.

Here was only a part of the thing, itself, and if he knew one of his men, he did not yet feel certain of the other. The night should bring that uncertainty into clarity if possible.

The darkness hid the couple from view at length in this case, steps had died away into silence. Cleek touched Dollops upon the shoulder and commenced wriggling upon his stomach down toward such a next of day, and out into the open, lying flat as Indians do, until they had slid the distance between the two clumps of shrubs, and lay concealed, some twelve feet nearer to the scene of operations.

"See anything of your Dago friend?" whispered Cleek, after they had watched for a few minutes, when the dawn had penetrated through the veil of night, would have passed out of sight and vision as though it were a mirage of their own making.

Dollops' voice was barely above a breath.

"Yesir. Just dahn there ter the night. Feller with the black moustache, slim-lipped Johnny in the dark suit. Got blinkers on 'im like black velvet from 'vot I sees. Proper turner—the 'dirt' dog!"

"Not yet. Oh! yes, I see 'im. An Italian all right. But what the dickens is an Italian doing in those outlandish parts? And what a situation can this peering climate have for people of their ilk? First the Lady of the Castle—and now this one. Unless—"

There might have been a connection between 'em. Did you find any trace of Captain Macdonald's handwriting, Dollops, to show me a letter from 'is groom?"

"Pinned it while we was 'a talkin'." It showed it ter me, an 'it's in the pocket. Summink wrong there, Gov'nor?"

"So wrong that it will take more than a little explaining, upon the gentleman's part to put it right, my lad," responded Cleek in a whisper. "I want to see that letter badly. But it will wait until we are back again at the house. And we'll be back in a jiffy. I'm satisfied with the result of this night's work. In this direction, at any rate, you're done well—better than I could have done in similar circumstances, and I'm downright pleased with you!"

TODAY'S RECIPES

Mousseline—Cream three tablespoons of oil and beat in three-tablespoons of egg yolks, adding one at a time and beating steadily between each addition. Add four tablespoons of cream, a quarter of a teaspoon of salt, a pinch of paprika, and cook over hot water, stirring constantly until it thickens. Flavor with a toblespoon and a half of lemon juice and two more tablespoons of butter cut in tiny bits. Beat with an egg beater and do not reheat. The sauce is good either hot or cold.

Coffee Tapioca—Beat three cups of strong instant coffee and add three tablespoons of quick-cooking tapioca that has been soaked in rich milk to cover. Cook over hot water until the mixture is clear and transparent. Coarsinate one-quarter of a cup of sugar, add the tapioca and coffee mixture and stir until dissolved. Beat the yolks of two eggs with half a cup of sugar and gradually mix with the cream and turn into glasses. Serve with sweetened whip cream or plain cream.

Grilled Tomatoes—For the grilled tomatoes, cut the vegetable in rather thick slices, dust with salt and dip in melted butter. Broil until slightly browned, using an oyster broiler.

Dust with extra salt and a little paprika and serve on each slice of tomato a crisp bacon curl.

CLEANING BLACK CLOTHES

The woman who goes away on vacation wearing black clothes has far more trouble keeping them clean than do the women who wear colors. It might be suggested, why not heed

the following suggestion, which was given by a cleaner and which takes a little trouble, but the result is satisfactory.

First brush the dress carefully. See that the "black broom" is thoroughly cleaned afterward, or use another one to dip in a cup of strong coffee to which has been added one teaspoon of ammonia.

Before applying the whisk broom shake it quite a little so that it will not wet the dress too much. Then brush the fabric quickly.

If spots remain, and they usually do, clean them with a small sponge dipped in ammonia, alcohol and water in equal parts.

It is best not to try this mixture on green spots, as come from the food at the table. Remove these by sponging with salt dissolved in alcohol in the proportion of one to four.

When the skirt is dry, cover the spots with a woolen cloth which is slightly damp and then press quickly with a hot iron.

A SUGGESTION

Water Spots—Remove water spots on waxed floor by rubbing in a circular motion with a cloth saturated with turpentine, then with a dry piece of flannel.

The Step on the Stair

EDGAR QUENTON, BARTHOLOMEW is the nephew of the wealthy, eccentric and retired man of the same name and is telling the story. There are three of the same name; the uncle and two nephews, sons of different brothers and sisters.

Quenton, the only girl cousin, who lived at the home of the uncle. It has been understood that she is engaged to be married to the dark cousin at the time that Edgar Quenton returns from a long life abroad and visits his uncle.

The story began with a letter, thrusting some papers into the hands of the teller of the story, but which were meant for the cousin who was to be married. The letter was in a maddening tone, masking the grief of his cousin and falls deeply in love with Orpha.

Leaving my quiet corner I reentered the court where the dance was at its height. Round and round in an ecstatic circle, the couples swept to and fro in entrancing melody and rhythm. From their midst the fountain sent up its spray of dazzling drops a glitter with the colors of the rainbow.

What Orpha thought of me as I finally came upon her at the end of the dance, I have often wondered. She appeared startled, possibly because I was looking anything but natural myself. But she smiled in response to my greeting only to grow sober again, as I quickly informed her that her father was a little indisposed and would be glad to see her for a few minutes in his own room.

"Tapa, I don't understand," she murmured, "is never ill." Then suddenly, "Where is Edgar?" The question as she uttered it struck me keenly. However, I managed to reply in a purposeless carelessness.

"In the library, I think, where they are practicing some new steps. Shall I take you to him?" She shook her head, but accepted my arm after a show of hesitation quite unconscious I was sure. "No, I will go right up."

Without further words I led her to the foot of the great staircase. As she withdrew her arm from mine she turned her face toward me. Its look of trouble smote sorely on my heart. "Shall I go up with you?" she asked. She shook her head as before, and with a strange wavering smile I found it hard to interpret, sped lightly upward.

A few minutes later I had located my missing partner and was dancing with seeming gaiety; but almost lost my step as Edgar brushed by me with a girl whom I had not seen before. He was as pale as a man well could be who was not ill, and though his lips were a forced smile the girl was doing all the talking.

"What was in the air? What would the next half hour bring to him—to me—to all of us?" I tried to do my duty by my partner, but his face was so pale and I hardly think she carried away a very favorable impression of me. When released, I sought to hide myself behind a wall, but he was as pale as a man well could be who was not ill, and though his lips were a forced smile the girl was doing all the talking.

That Edgar had the same idea was soon apparent. He was as pale as a man well could be who was not ill, and though his lips were a forced smile the girl was doing all the talking. He was as pale as a man well could be who was not ill, and though his lips were a forced smile the girl was doing all the talking.

There was, however, a reason for this, aside from any personal anxiety he may have had. They two, as acting host and hostess, were to lead the procession to the supper-room. I was to take in a Miss Barton and while I kept this young lady in sight, I remained where I was, watching Edgar and those empty stairs for the coming of that fairy figure whose aspect might reveal my future fate.

Nothing could be so important as this hoped-for doubling of my mind from its heavy burden. Fortunately I had not long to wait. She presently appeared, and with my first view of her face doubt became certainty in my bewildered mind. For she came with a joyful rush and there was but one thing which could so wing her feet and give such brightness to her every movement. The desire, her heart was full, hers. Nothing that her father had said had robbed her of that. Then as Edgar advanced I perceived that his face was as pale as a man well could be who was not ill, and though his lips were a forced smile the girl was doing all the talking.

He was as pale as a man well could be who was not ill, and though his lips were a forced smile the girl was doing all the talking. He was as pale as a man well could be who was not ill, and though his lips were a forced smile the girl was doing all the talking.

That he should fall to me and appreciate this lovelessness was no longer a matter of doubt. He was as pale as a man well could be who was not ill, and though his lips were a forced smile the girl was doing all the talking.

That he should fall to me and appreciate this lovelessness was no longer a matter of doubt. He was as pale as a man well could be who was not ill, and though his lips were a forced smile the girl was doing all the talking.

plied the seat at his right. What a juxtaposition for him! But she did not seem to be affected by it, but chatted and smiled with a composure starting to see in one who to my unhappy knowledge had just passed through one of the really great crises in life. How could she look just that way, smile just that way, with a breaking heart beneath her smile and face? It was incomprehensible to me till I suddenly awoke to the fact that I was smiling, too, and quite broadly at some remark made by my friendly little partner.

Examining the moment was approaching which I was anticipating with so much dread. If the announcement of Edgar and Orpha's engagement was to be made, it would be during one of my visits to the desert and that was on the point of being served. Edgar, I could see, was nursing himself for the ordeal, and as Orpha's eyes sought his, I prepared myself to hear what would be my transcendent dream and take away all charm from life.

"Friends!" Was that Edgar speaking? Surely this was not his voice I heard. But it was. Through the mist which had suddenly clouded everything in that long room, I caught him standing at his full height, with his glass held high in hand. The hush was instantaneous. This seemed to unnerve him, for I saw him quiver and tremble. From that overblown glass, but he quickly recovered the gay sang-froid which habitually distinguished him, and with the aspect and bearing of a man who would be isolated from the whole scene, in a rush of joy and wonder, seeing everything as through a mist and really hearing nothing but the pounding of his own heart, retreating with every breath. "All is not over for me. There is yet hope. There is yet hope!"

But a doubt which came all too soon for my comfort drove much of the joy from his face. What if we had heard but half of what our young host had to say? What if his next words were those which I for one most dreaded? Uncertain as to the result, I tried to make a graceful exit, but he would not let me go. "I have a word to speak for my uncle who, I am sorry to say, is indisposed. First, he bids me extend to you his hearty greetings and best wishes for your very good health. He drank—we all drank—and joyfully."

"Secondly," a forced emphasis, for all his strong command over himself breaking in upon the murmur of his words, "he bids me say that this bringing together of his best friends in celebration of an event dear to his heart and as he hopes of interest to yourselves. It is my pleasure, good friends, to announce to you the engagement of my uncle's ward, Miss Colfax, to one whom you all know, Dr. Hunter. Harry, stand up, I drink to your future happiness and here, oh, that slight, slight pause—men and women ready to lay down their lives for their faith."

would never have had his fame gloriously blazoned in the pages of the greatest book in the world. Sometimes I think the churches have too much organization. Certainly 200 different protestant denominations in the United States seems like a long division for effective work for the same purposes. The Catholics have no such divisions. The politicians never have more than two. And yet, I doubt not there are Stephens in every one, men and women ready to lay down their lives for their faith.

Stoughton Here Sunday Against Local Leaguers

STOUGHTON, Wis., Sept. 13.—Stoughton, trailing close on the heels of Janesville for third place in the southern Wisconsin league, will play the Janesville team on Sunday at the Janesville home track. The game will start at 2:30 p. m.

The Janesville team will be out to clean up the Stoughton boys. They need this game to keep them in the running for second place, a fight that is drawing the widest kind of interest. The Stoughton boys, one of them by the close score of 4 to 2.

While this game is being played here, the local fans will be open to the idea of how Edgerton comes out at Deerfield. This is one of the most vital games of the season. The Tobacco City team is expected to clinch second place in the loop.

Edgerton has defeated the Deers twice, once by 2 to 0 and the other time 11 to 1. Playing at home, the Deers have won three of their last four games, and it is quite possible they may turn the tables and capture the contest.

If Edgerton loses on Sunday, then the center of activity will move away to Edgerton where the following week, Janesville will appear. Whatever happens, that game is going to be a classic.

The Port was to have entertained Cambridge at Port Sunday, but because of the Chattanooga being held there, the scene has been transferred to Cambridge. The Robins are expected to add little trouble in adding another win to their long list.

Busy Man's Sport Page

By FRANK SINCLAIR

THREE weeks ago this column started talking about Babe Ruth. He was coming up then and coming fast. Now, for the first time since 1921, his name may be sung as the absolute King of Swat. The Bambino has taken the lead in long distance hitting, topping all others with a total of 30 home runs, as against 29 by "Cy" Williams, the Badger player with the Phillies. He has swiped the lead in batting by the narrow margin of .0006 from Harry Heilmann of Detroit. The move to crown him as the best player of the year is growing.

Ruth, according to Associated Press figures, has played in 107 games, has a total base record now of 278 and has 144 hits, including 25 doubles and eight triples in addition to his circuit clouts.

IN OTHER BATTING averages, Tris Speaker of the Indians has taken third place from James G. Cobb as runner up, having led the first 10 and now is 11th, the first time in many years. In the National League, the Cubs continue to display their heels to all others, leading with .405. Wheat holds to second, though out by injuries. Barnhart of the Pirates added 10 points to go into the select 10. Combs of Louisville is showing the way in the American association, though not yet leading, for his work has put him in third. East, Terry, Combs, Lamar and Brief are fighting a fierce battle for the upper positions, at present standing in above order.

DURING the week, Eddie Collins of the White Sox added four more stolen bases to his record and now has 25 to his credit. Eddie also has 33 sacrifice hits to top them all. Grantham of the Cubs holds first place still in thievery. In the last week he has added six, and leads with 32, though Carey of Pittsburgh is close behind with 31. McNair, Boston, and Duncanson, Cincinnati, are tied for sacrifice hits with 23 each. Bertie of the Cubs has 21, and is getting with 113 in the American association. Murphy of Columbus and Conney of Milwaukee lead in stolen bases with 33.

Sunday, Sept. 16, will be observed as "Pop" Anson memorial day by baseballmen.

WHEN MY MARE GOES RIDING

Horses are getting scarcer and scarcer in these days of motor cars and low-priced gas. They are so scarce that some folks build palace cars and give the steeds a ride when they want to take them anywhere. That's what they do with harness race horses, anyway. John Nichols of Sheboygan, former mayor of Janesville, has a huge truck so arranged that he can put his horses in them standing up cross-wise of the car and give each a bed and a feed box. The above picture was taken here during the Janesville fair. Nichols is standing beside the truck and his horse, Top of the Morning, is being brought to the truck. No rail-road box cars for Johnny's horses.

WHAT THE "IKES" ARE DOING

Some are reporting that fishing is not very good this time of the year in the waters of southern Wisconsin, especially in Rock river, but O. R. Tripke, 407 North Pearl street, says it is. Look at this:

Should a resident of the state of Wisconsin who holds a fishing license take a non-resident who has not taken out a license fishing with him, in his boat, the boat is liable to seizure, the attorney general's office ruled Saturday. Recently a resident who had complied with the requirements of the law took a non-resident who had no license fishing with him in St. Croix county. The power boat in which they were fishing, the property of the resident, was seized, and J. B. Messerschmidt, assistant attorney general ruled that the game warden was within his rights.

Twenty-five years ago it was an uncommon thing for fishermen to pull out 30 to 40 pound catfish from Sugar river. Many of us will remember, says Editor Scherpp in the Broadhead Ind.-Register, that they used to come back from Wisconsin two fishing and a party of three, but four would have the bottom of a democrat wagon covered with catfish of unusual size. Frank Gritz, maker recently captured one of the big ones a 34 pounder, 43 inches in length. His head was ten inches across and a foot long, and one person who saw him said that his mouth was big enough to cover a man's head. The catch was made in the river below Deatur dam.

You can't make real clothes unless you put your whole soul into the job. The workman with the needle, the designer, the cutter, the spinner of the yarn, which by the way must be corded and spun from the finest grade of wool,—of which there are fourteen kinds; all these little points must be embraced in the spirit which we are constantly striving to develop and perfect in our clothes building organization, and thereby insure each man's personal effort and interest in each garment we turn out.

You will readily grasp the great amount of satisfaction and service which you will receive in wearing garments such as these! And you will find they cost the same because of the personal interest used in their assembly. Our price range is very large, as we are showing suits and overcoats from $22.00 up, to the finest; all conceived in this spirit of great value giving! ## The Trouble Shooter

Timely Tips for the Auto Owner.
 By E. H. SCOTT.
 Copyright 1923.

Watch the Kind of Parts Used in Repairs Made to Your Car

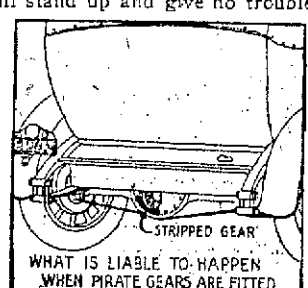

So much trouble and expense is caused to automobile owners through unscrupulous repairmen, who, for the purpose of making a few extra cents profit, use imitation, instead of genuine parts, when making repairs or replacements, that this week I am going to give you a few tips that will guard you against this kind of graft.

Here is a case that came to my notice a short time ago. An owner had a knock in his engine and drove into a service station where it was diagnosed as a loose wrist pin. This particular owner knew a mechanic who worked at a certain garage, so he decided to have the work done there. In making the repair, the garageman did not use genuine factory wrist pins, but "just as good" pins put out by an imitation or pirate parts manufacturer, because they were a little cheaper. Within a short time after the repair was made, the engine commenced to knock, service station. When the owner insisted the knock could not be caused by them, because they had just been renewed.

An examination was made and showed that not only the wrist pins were worn badly, but it had also gouged the cylinder walls to such an extent the cylinder could not even be rebored and safely used again, and it was necessary to install a new cylinder block, a repair that cost $85.00.

Another case occurred just last week where a car had been overhauled, valves ground in, new pistons and rings fitted, and a set of new contact points fitted. The car ran all right for a few weeks, then the engine began to get hard to start and to misfire now and again. The climber came when the owner was driving along a crowded city street and suddenly the engine stopped. There he was, right in the center of the traffic, with a line of cars backed up behind him, tooting their horns and making things generally unpleasant. The car was rolled over to the curb and a man from the service station called. He quickly found the trouble in the ignition, and traced it to the set of imitation "just as good and a lot cheaper" contact points that had been fitted when the engine was overhauled. The thin veneer of tungsten metal had quickly burst off, leaving the steel base underneath exposed. The country is flooded with inferior ignition parts turned out by the "pirate" parts manufacturer. Always use genuine parts, then you are assured of something that will stand up and give no trouble.

Suppose you hear a grind or hum in the rear axle, and simply say to the repair man that you want it fixed. He goes to work and tears down the axle, then tells you that a new ring gear and pinion is needed. You say all right, go ahead. He uses an imitation part. In a few weeks or months, you have the old trouble back again. Why? These gears must be very carefully hardened, and heat treated. An alloy steel must be used to stand up under the extremely high pressures exerted on the teeth. Perhaps the imitation part is made from common carbon steel which was not hardened sufficiently to make it hard enough to resist wear or was hardened too much and made brittle. What is the result? The gear that was not hardened enough soon wears and becomes noisy, and the gear that was hardened too much, breaks a tooth or perhaps the whole gear strips when a sudden strain is applied. The genuine gear is made from an alloy steel which is tough to stand the strain, and is carefully hardened to take the wear on the face of the teeth. All of these things cannot be detected by simply glancing at the part. The real difference lies where you cannot see it. For the small difference in cost, it does not pay to allow imitation parts to be used in any repairs.

Another reason why you should buy only genuine parts, is the fact that manufacturers from time to time find it necessary to make changes in dimensions on certain parts which cannot be followed by the imitation parts manufacturer, and if these pirate parts are used, trouble is sure to result. The manufacturer knows what kind of parts suit his car better than anyone else. Every time you have a repair made, convince yourself that a genuine part is being used. Pirate parts generally cost a few cents less than genuine parts, but in the finish, if you use the pirate part, you will more than make up for the difference in the trouble and expense you will have later on when the "cheap" part begins to wear or break. If you make sure that all parts used in any repair or replacements are genuine manufacture, you will save money in future repairs, and at the same time get more pleasure and satisfaction out of your car, because of the absence of trouble.

Home after the day's work -

- to receive greetings from the loving wife and smiles
from contented children -

that's Paradise

—Every man who has experienced this thrill of home-coming will tell you that all the sacrifices that you may be called upon to make, all the extended efforts that you may put forth in making home ownership a reality is more than repaid every day in contentment, united thoughts for love and in pride of possession.

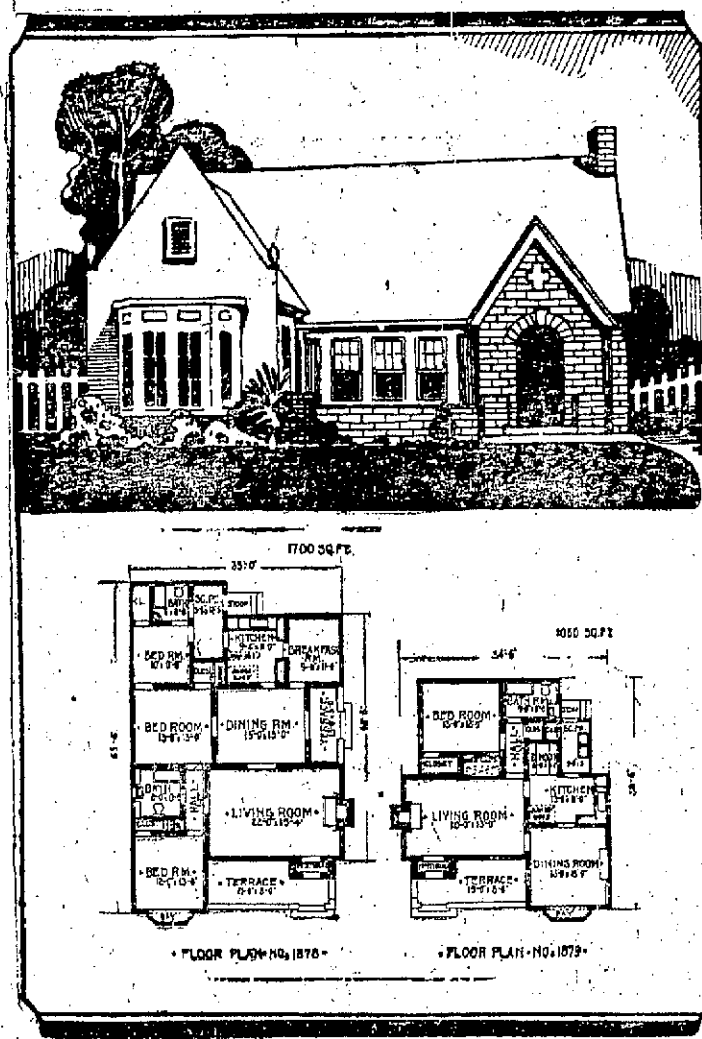

—He would not exchange places with kings, great wealth holds no glowing inducements for him; he lives in a heaven all his own and gets real enjoyment from his daily labors because the reimbursement from his efforts are utilized for the making of home joys.

—The wife and kiddies receive his very first considerations; it is through them that great happiness comes to him. He takes pleasure in adding conveniences to the home, appreciating fully every burden he can lighten—every step he can save the wife means that many more cheerful smiles for him.

—Prudent men know, too, that successful men and women receive their training for success or failure, for good or bad during the early years of life. Children need then, more than at any other time, home teachings, ideal environments and thoughtful care, such as only real homes give.

The Home Is The Cradle of Democracy

It has been said with truthfulness that, "the home is the cradle of democracy." Americanism was founded on the platform of freedom and independence and in home ownership we fully realize the meaning of these two American ideals: Freedom from the waste and burden of paying rent and independence in the shelter and protection we are privileged in giving our loved ones. Nothing can promote more happiness and contentment in a family than the possession of their own home, and appreciating this, our every effort should be toward attaining and maintaining ideal homes, for everything we do to aid success, and even success itself can be rightfully measured by the happiness and contentment that comes from home ownership.

Plans Nos. 1878—1879

Here we are featuring a modernized English bungalow home with alternate floor plans. The larger of the two plans covers the home as shown and is one of the most conveniently arranged interiors you could hope to create. The second plan shows a much smaller room arrangement and while the construction cost will be but half that of the larger plan it is just as attractive and convenient and will be adopted by those who are desirous of building a small home.

The exterior is unique in that the entrance front is built up of brick while the balance of the home is treated in stucco. The careful grouping of the windows and shadow effect secured on the roof by applying two rows of shingles every fifth course are features that call for special comment.

The home building editor will gladly give any additional information you want to receive and as this department is being retained that we could be of every assistance to you, you are to feel free to consult and advise with it on any matters pertaining to home building, plans, etc.
